The Color of the Blood.

Having recently examined a large number of specimens of human blood from of different ages, ranging from four to seventy-six years, some being those in robust health, others being tuberculous, I was struck with the great difference in the shade of color presented, some being of a very rich tint, others very pale. The richest color was in the blood of a girl twenty-six years of age, a graduate of Vas-sar college, who had the highest anthropometic measurement for respiratory capaci-ty in a class of about 500 girls. Her health was excellent, and she consumed rather more flesh food than is usual.

The next highest tint was found in the blood of a woman about seventy years old, with a somewhat unusual chest measurement, having also excellent respiratory capacity and being in fine health. woman, on the contrary, does not eat flesh at all. I expected in her case to find a more than ordinary number of white blood corpuscles, but there were far less than usual, it being difficult to find them, they were so few.

The palest blood was from a chlorotic servant girl of twenty-five years and in a tuberculous boy of four. There was not much perceptible difference in their cases. The girl had naturally good respiratory power, but she had lessened it by tight clothing and an almost constant indoor lif. for a long time. After spending a mont' that it is settled that Governor Abbett is at the seaside I examined her blood again and found the tint somewhat deeper than before.-M. L. Holbrook in Science.

Zoln's Defense.

M. Zola attacks his critics for being an gry with him for stating the whole truth about the war. To do so was, he declares a duty. France was nearly ruined because she believed in the French trooper "as the conqueror of the world, singing as he runs across fallen kingdoms." He resolved to teach his fellow countrymen that war was "a thing too serious, too terrible for us to lie about." "I concealed nothing, I sought to show how a nation like our own, after so many victories, could be so miserably beaten, and I wished also to show out of what depths we have raised ourselves in twenty years, and in what a blood bath a strong people can be regenerated. My conviction is that if the falsely is sound advice.-London Spectator.

Indian Jewelers. "The Pueblos are the jewelers of the aborigines," said Captain Howard Barker, of New Mexico. "They cut, grind and polish turquoises, and although their work is quite primitive, it is much sought after by members of other tribes. The Pueblos get in return for it many of the necessaries of Indian life. As many as ten ponies are sometimes given for a fine string of turises, polished and strung by these primitive lapidaries. The Navajoes have been long and justly famed for their silver work, which is a much prized article of barter among Indian tribes. The Navajoes use mostly coin silver in their work. In making small ornaments the coin is not melted, but is beaten out thin and shaped to suit. A few chisels and hammers, a wooden block and a small furnace constitute the kit of tools of one of these dusky silversmitha. --St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

IT IS DUE TO THE DOMINATION OF THE M'KINLEY BILL.

The Tariff Having Put a Tax on Wool, the Manufacturer in Order to Keep Down the Prices of His Products Adulterates with Old Clothes Ground Up.

Evidence is coming thick and fast from all quarters that the shoddy industry is experiencing an unprecedented boom. Readers of The American Wool and Cotton Reporter cannot but have noticed the notes on new shoddy mills, additions to old ones, etc. Here is one from that journal of Oct. 10, 1892:

"James Bowers' Sons, Chester, Pa. manufacturers of all wool shoddies, report business with them as very good. They have been obliged to run some departments up to 9 o'clock evenings to keep up with their orders. The firm have now in process of erection a new addition to meet the growing demands of their trade. This building will be 30 by 50 feet."

Here is another under date of Oct. 27: "Messrs. T. H. Gray & Co., manufac turers of and dealers in wool shoddies factory located at Hyde Park, Mass. have completed a large addition, the dimensions of which are 75 by 45 feet, and are now running with increased facilities for extracting, dveing and manufacturing all grades of wool shoddies and extracts. This is in addition to the regular shoddy business which they have carried on for the past twenty years." This same journal, in speaking of the importations, says: "In cloths there has been a notable increase over last year, while the amount of rags, shoddy, wastes, etc., has nearly doubled, the total amount of this kind of stuff brought in for the eight months being over 208,771 pounds, against only 118,786 pounds last year, an increase of nearly 100 per cent." The shoddy column in this journal testifies, as it has done for more than a year, to the brisk demand for shoddles, woolen rags, new clips, extracts, wool waste, cotton waste, etc. Advertisements of twenty-seven different shoddy manufacturers and dealers appear on this page. On another page is a description of an exhibit of wools, hairs, shoddies, etc., at the mechanics' fair in Bos ton. Here are two extracts from it:

"In the corner of the building where this exhibit is railed off are fifty-seven different samples of cotton and wool, each of which is different in some mate rial aspect from every other. Here is shown nearly every kind of fleece-the cheap and much used shoddy and the hair of the cow and the goat, which are all used in the weaving of fabrics for human wear.

"There is camel hair from Russia and quantities of goat hair and cow hair so treated that it does not look like the original article, but it is all in a state of preparation on the way to manufacture It has some sort of fiber, some length which enabled it to be woven in with wool, and so it helps to add body to the fabric. But the shoddy is the most suggestive. Here is something of which it is said truly that it is 'all wool,' but it has no fiber at all. It is old white blankets and white wool fabrics of other sorts all picked to pieces till it is perfeetly comminuted, and it lies up light and fluffy, ready to be mixed with the fiber of wool and so woven into cloth. There are collections of these wool ex tracts, as they are called, each of which is true to the test of being all wool, but none of which has any fiber to enable it and healthy; try Electric to hold together of itself. Such is the If "La Grippe" has le cent., as the agent of one of the prominent mills has said."

A short time ago this same journal, which, by the way, is a protectionist paper, said on the subject of adulteration of goods:

"There is some complaint made by clothiers that the quality of the goods now being made by the domestic mills is not up to the old standard. The complaint is not alone with the manufacturing clothier, but is made also by the retail dealer; even some of the well known standard makes are put down as falling short of their old standard. No doubt came out with a letter some two years lic. ago in which it was stated that as a re sult of the McKinley bill prices would either be higher or else the product of the mills protected would deteriorate. Almost immediately following the pas sage of the bill prices were advanced wholesale advance. "When many of the prices returned to their old figures and business became eye many of the cloths appear fully up to the standard, and it is only after they are doing service for the consumer that the deception is discovered." The New York Times of Oct. 80 says editorially: Governor Russell, of Massachusetts, has supplied some striking facts with special reference to the substitutes for wool. Every one knows that the dura bility of woolen cloth is due to the peculiar fiber of wool, a fiber that is not only very strong to resist strain, but which by a curious arrangement of minute barbs will so lock and combine as to make a cloth that will, if well woven of good wool, last almost indefinitely. Now the McKinley tariff having put a very heavy tax on wool, the manufacturer, in order to keep down the prices of his product, uses a great variety of adulterants patriotic lie begins again * * we or substitutes, chiefly the former in shall again be beaten." That at least clothing and the latter in carpets. The adulterants are generally in the nature of "shoddy," or old woolen cloth ground up, or "noils," which are the short fibers left by the carling out of the long fibers.

None of these gives any strength to the 2,228,672. These figures represent the number of Dr. Kings New Discovery for Consumption. Governor Russell showed from the stalistics of manufacturers how the making of these adulterants has come to be a regular business openly followed and steadily increasing. Thus the shoddy es tablishments in the United States in creased from 98 in 1890 to 134 in 1891, and the capital from $4,091,207 to $6,000, 000. Here was an increase of nearly onehalf in the investment of capital in this strange business in one year under the stimulating influence of the McKinley tariff. The process has been going on for ten years, and during all that time was within the last year. Campaign Methods Contrasted. It is very fortunate that the means adopted by the two parties in the conduct of the campaign should have conformed to their respective ends. The aim of the Democratic party was to benefit the whole people of the country by relieving industry of hampering burdens, but this aim appealed to the whole people, and no one class had a special interest in it such as could be made th basis of an appeal for money to carry on the campaign. There were of course the usual and inevitable ambitions of office seekers, but these were engaged in local conflicts, and left little to spare for the exigencies of the general canvass.

On the other hand, the Republican contention in behalf of the hampering of all traffic and industry for the enrichment of a few favored persons made a campaign of corruption absolutely inevitable. The managers had no difficulty in making out a list of the men whose interest it was to supply them with money in quantities large enough to stifle the popular protest against the methods by which that money had been acquired. The newspaper owned and edited by the Republican candidate for the vice presidency saved them all trouble beforehand by compiling a list of such persons, a list of which the purpose was so evident that it became known at once as the "Fat Friers"

Guide." It was because these men had private interests dependent upon legislation and opposed to the public interest that they vere expected to contribute largely to the fund of their party.

Of course this situation made inevi table a campaign of corruption. While the Democratic managers could not have carried on such a campaign if they would, the Republican managers could not have avoided it if they would.—New
